

Troy Trulock
Mayor of Madison, Alabama

Troy Trulock was elected as the Mayor of Madison, Alabama in August, 2012. Madison is one of the fastest growing cities in the state and has received national recognition as one of America's Top 50 Best Places to live by CNN Money, as well as the second best place in the country to grow up by U.S. News and World Reports. Madison is conveniently located adjacent to Huntsville, Huntsville International Airport, and Redstone Arsenal, and boasts high average incomes and education levels along with business-welcoming, family-friendly environments that entice young professionals, retirees, and growing families.

Troy graduated from the University of Kansas in 1986 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Management as well as was recognized as a Distinguished Military Graduate (top of his class) from the University's Army ROTC program. Following graduation and commissioning, Troy served in multiple Army units and as a combat veteran was awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service during the Gulf War. Troy also received a Master of Science degree in Management from the Naval Postgraduate School.

He and his family were assigned to Redstone Arsenal and took up residence in Madison in 2000. In 2006, after successfully managing a multiple billion dollar Army missile program, he declined attendance at the Military War College and chose to retire from the Army, deciding that "Madison was the right place to retire, raise a family, and to volunteer our time to give back to the community."

Troy and his family have been involved in the Madison community for years and were recently honored to be named the 2011 Madison Family of the Year. In addition, Troy was recognized as the 2011 Madison Outstanding Veteran of the Year by the Rotary Club of Madison. Prior to taking office, Troy served on multiple Board of Directors and Executive Committees, supporting growth and prosperity within our community and the Tennessee Valley.

Troy and his wife, Dana, have been married for over 26 years and have been blessed with two children, one in college and one in High School.